DEDICATION

This book is dedicated to the citizens of Chelsea, past, present and future. It is especially dedicated to the memory of Stella Bell (Lyon) Russell, born in Chelsea, on August 5, 1910 died in Chelsea March 15, 1957

EXPLANATION

This book is the result of 8 years of genealogical research and refinement. The book was originally done in 1975, by Ernest Russell, Vivian V. Kill, Hazel Aldrich and Sid Gilman. In the past year I have compared the Chelsea Vital Records, searched the Burial Permits for Chelsea, 1903-1980, and attempted to do some proof-reading of the original manuscript. The result is a Commemorative Revised Edition of the Chelsea Burials, 1736-1980. It contains an update from 1975 to 1980. It also, contains roughly 400 burials that appear to have been without gravestones.

It doesn't contain any stones that have been destroyed over the course of time. DON'T TAKE THIS AS AN ABSOLUTE AUTHORITY ON PEOPLE BURIED IN CHELSEA. I am sure that I don't have each and every burial, and that the quoted inscriptions are without error. People who appear without stones are indicated with *.

HISTORY OF CHELSEA CEMETERIES

It is an inevitable fact of life that as soon as a town becomes well established cemeteries are soon designated and set aside for the use of its citizens. Chelsea by no means has been an exception to this rule. It is not ironic that a cemetery was established at both centers of Chelsea's settlement. The Hardy Place Cemetery and the (Old) Chelsea cemetery were put into use soon after the arrival of the first citizens. The Hardy Place cemetery contains the graves of roughly 40 of the early settlers of the Chelsea West Hill. The cemetery, however, has long been abandoned and most of it has reverted to forest cover and only one stone remains readable. The stone is that of Abner H. Howes, son of Lucius & Lucy Howes, who died April 3, 1813, age 15 months.

The original site of the village settlement, by Thomas Moore Jr., is now the location of the Old Cemetery. Unlike, the Hardy Place Cemetery, it is cared for annually and in good repair with about 600 existing stones. Thomas Porter Moore, the son of the first settler and the first child to be born in Chelsea is buried within a few feet of the place in which he was born. The foundations of the early buildings at the Moore homestead can still be seen in the Old Cemetery.

The largest and best maintained cemetery in Chelsea is Highland Cemetery, which was set aside as a burying ground during the Civil War. Some stones dating pre-Civil War most have been moved there from other cemeteries after the opening of Highland. This cemetery lies on the side hill that faces the Chelsea-Thunbridge Road and contains some 2000 graves.

The West Hill Cemetery was established in 1830, to accommodate the growing West Hill community and to serve the West Hill Church, that stands at the entrance to the cemetery. It contains roughly 350 graves. Before the centralization of the burials on the West Hill in the West Hill Cemetery, several smaller cemeteries were used. The Wiggin Cemetery contains about 50 stones and lies on a little used road that runs beside the Old Harry O'Donnell home on the West Hill. It was used from roughly 1820-to-1920. Another small cemetery lies near the Lawrence Allen farm and contains 50 stones. This is the Lincoln Cemetery and contains the graves of the Lincoln, Hood and Smith families. Yet another cemetery below Clyde Hook's is the Allen Cemetery, so called because it was the original settlement of the Allen Family. This cemetery contains about 70 stones.

Along with the settlement of the West Hill and the development of cemeteries there came the development of cemeteries on the East Hill. Located above the Old School House on the Strafford Road is the Blaisdell Cemetery, which is more commonly known as the Laird or Ladd Cemetery, it contains about 30 stones. Located on the Chelsea-Vershire border, is the Spear Family cemetery, with about 15 stones. This cemetery is located on the Old Beedle Farm. Located on George Lyford's farm is the Corwin Cemetery with stones that date to the late 1790's. The cemetery holds about 30 graves, although only three stones remain. A small cemetery with nine uninscribed fieldstones lies on the Sabin Densmore property.

Located in various lots of land in Chelsea are representatives of another fassit of Vermont life, the Family Burying Ground. Several of these exist one is located on the Nelson LaFrancis farm and contains about 9 stones. This cemetery is called the Flint cemetery, as members of the Flint and House family are buried there. Yet another on the West Hill is the grave of Joseph Spiller, who died October 31, 1837, of Smalpox, age 67 years, 4 months. This stone is on the Charlie Hayward farm. The Goodrich Lot with only two stones is located near the Chelsea-Brookfield line.

Near the Tunbridge-Chelsea line is the Noyes Lot, with the grave of Sarah Noyes, relict of Issac Noyes, who died April 11, 1855, age 79 years, 9 months, 6 days. Also, on Hoyt Hill is the Boardman Cemetery with two stone. The only one readable is that of Stephen Boardman who died September 3, 1801, age 30 years.

The history of Chelsea's people are documented by its cemeteries. Settlers from Connecticut, Massachussetts, New Hampshire, as well as other neighboring states have found their resting place here. Settlers from other counties, such as, Ireland, England, Scotland came here. For whatever reason they came: to raise their families, defend a country, and to help build a town, state, and nation. It is then truely fitting that we recall them in this bicentennial year of the chartering of Chelsea as a Town.
